Harvest and Wine Making Process

Organic grapes are harvested at the end of August or in the first part of September, preferably in the early morning or before sunset, to maintain freshness. The harvest is mechanical, minimizing the time interval between grape picking and winemaking. The destemmed and crushed grapes are then transferred to temperature-controlled containers. Maceration and fermentation on the skins follow, through the addition of selected yeasts, followed by racking and malolactic fermentation.

Tasting Notes

- Intense ruby red
- Red fruits, cherry and sour cherry with vanilla notes in a smooth balance
- Soft, smooth and with delicate tannins
